Why Software Compliance?

The Companies Act 71, 2008 holds directors of business legally accountable for good corporate governance, including compliance with applicable laws as they relate to intellectual property and information technology. This has resulted in greater focus on the use of licensed software and licensed reproduction from published editions.

What Impact does Non-Compliance Have?

Non-compliance negatively impacts software publishers, creates unfair competition for legitimate companies, damages brands through distribution of substandard products and exposes customers to a range of IT risks, including security breaches and data loss.
