CERTIFICATE

Do I get a certificate once I completed the course?

Upon successfully completing the course, you can download a certificate of completion. The certificate confirms your participation, but the course is not accredited.

Certification requires a minimum score of 80% across all seven end-of-module assessments. Your certificate will become available for download immediately upon meeting these criteria.

REASON THE COURSE IS NOT ACCREDITED

Clarifying accreditation vs non-accreditation

- In South Africa, an accredited course is a learning program that has been formally vetted, approved, and registered on the National Qualifications Framework (NQF).
- If a course is accredited, it means it is not just a "workshop" or "attendance certificate" - it is a legally recognized qualification that meets national quality standards.
- For a course to be accredited both the course and the institution (e.g. a school / college/ university) must be accredited.

ACCREDITATION

Requirements for accreditation

For a course to be accredited the following is required:

- A course must be accredited by SAQA (South African Qualifications Authority) on the NQF.
- A specific Quality Council (e.g. Umalusi) must approve and oversee the quality of the course.
- The institution (school / college / university) that teach the course must be "accredited" to teach that specific course.

This does not apply to the Companies and Intellectual Property Commission.

NON-ACCREDITED COURSES

Non-Accredited courses

Non-accredited short courses are highly valuable for gaining specific practical skills, but they do not provide NQF credits or result in a formal qualification.
